

BRITAIN TODAY

France football legend calls for social solidarity

World Cup winner Lilian Thuram urged graduates to “put solidarity at the heart of our society” as he received an honorary degree.

The former France defender said he feared the rise of right-wing ideology across Europe and increased focus on competition would lead to people becoming isolated.

He was at the University of Stirling on Wednesday to be recognised for his contribution to football, as well as his commitment to tackling racism through education and his own charity.

